- make more informed decisions when authorizing disclosure to others

HOW WE MAY USE AND DISCLOSE PROTECTED HEALTH INFORMATION ABOUT YOU

The following categories describe the ways that we use and disclose health information. Not every use or disclosure in a category will be listed. However, all of the ways we are permitted to use and disclose information will fall into one of the categories.

- For Treatment. We may use or disclose health information about you to provide you with medical treatment. We may disclose health information about you to doctors, nurses, therapists or other practice personnel who are involved in your health care. For example, a provider treating you for an injectable may need to know if you are taking blood thinners because it may affect the end result of the treatment or could potentially cause more bruising. In addition, the provider may need to tell a treating technician of a condition or medications you are taking in order to treat you safely. Essentially different treating employees of this practice may also share your health information in order to coordinate your care and provide you with treatments, medication, lab work and doppler scripts. We may also disclose health information about you to people outside the practice who may be involved in your medical care. This may include family members.
- For Payment. This practice does not bill insurances, all payments are made at the time of visit. However, your protected health information may be shared with the Business Manager for collections purposes if a form of payment is not valid.

- For Health Care Operations. We may use and disclose health information about you for our day-to-day health care operations. This is necessary to ensure that all patients receive quality care. For example, we may use health information for quality assessment and improvement activities and for developing and evaluating clinical protocols. We may also combine health information about many patients to help determine what additional services should offer, what services should be discontinued, and whether certain new treatments are effective. We may also use and disclose information for professional review, performance evaluation, and for training programs. Other aspects of health care operations that may require use and disclosure of your health information include accreditation, certification, licensing and credentialing activities, review and auditing, including compliance reviews, medical reviews, legal services and compliance programs. Your health information may be used and disclosed for the business management and general activities of the practice including resolution of internal grievances, customer service and due diligence in connection with a sale or transfer of the practice. In limited circumstances, we may disclose your health information to another entity subject to HIPAA for its own health care operations. We may remove information that identifies you so that the health information may be used to study health care and health care delivery without learning the identities of our patients.

For example, a research procedure may involve comparing the health and recovery of all patients who received one treatment to those who received another, for the same condition. All research procedures, however, are subject to a special approval process. This process evaluates a proposed research procedure and its use of health information, trying to balance the research needs with patients' need for privacy of their health information.
